

Exploring Atomic Money

Could it be that money as we currently know it is inefficient in so far as it has no specific purchasing power and no degree of personalisation?

The accumulation of money is fantastic fun but leads to the fruitless paralysis of actioned choice due to increasing available choice.

In some form of workable meritocratic * society where we earn what we need through what we do – and as much we want through that which we do – wealth through entire  health – could be possible for all.

* Meritocracy can be developed automatically via economic cloud computing involving skills learning, creativity and aesthetic reception.

 Monoatomic Gold as internalised Atomic Money personalised to our DNA is allegedly extremely good for human health.

Atomic Money also allows for the extinction of illegal economic activity as all transactions are monitored.

The system would develop harmoniously in to a fluid automated system for all (see also A Planet Without Borders regarding Atomic Passporting - people being able to work anywhere they wish).
